

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Express duty, advice, willingness, or intention to do something in spoken or written texts and in work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What are some ways that you are able to be more civically responsible and contribute to society?
- Do you think the government should be able to force people to be more civically responsible? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can express obligations and recommendations in the present and in the past.
- I can express willingness or intention to do something in the past or in the present.
- I can express that a fairly certain condition will be fulfilled.

Let's Explore!

We can consciously make a positive difference!

* "Consciously" means with thought and determination.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

I've spent a lot of time lately thinking about how I can help make the world a bit better and I've discovered that there are many ways to do it. Maybe I should have learned about this long ago, but it's never too late to start! If you look around, you will see that there are lots of small and large contributions that we can all make, every day. If you want to help people, you can donate money to a charitable organization or volunteer your time. If you want to help the environment, you can buy products from companies that follow the zero waste initiative and use sustainable resources, or you can participate in ecotourism.

We are all responsible for the world we live in so we must all find a way to contribute. We should all make a list of civic responsibilities that we are able to keep and consciously add to our responsibilities as we are able. Every day we ought to ask ourselves, "What small thing can I do today to help the people around me?" Even helping ourselves will help the rest of the world. If you want to help yourself, you can exercise and keep healthy. You can take a course and learn something new.

The healthier and better-educated our population is, the better our world will be. Healthy people are productive and don't put a strain on financial resources of the country. Educated and trained people are also better equipped to contribute to society. If we all improve ourselves, we will improve the world. So, we'd better look around, take note of where there is need, be less individualistic and make the effort to fulfill our civic responsibilities.

Let's Practice!

Let's all make the world better!

Instructions: Circle all the incorrect words, write the correction above them and underline modal verbs in the paragraph. Practice reading the text aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

Maybe I should has learned about this long ago, but it's never too late to starting! We are all responsible for the world we lived in so we musts all find a way to contribute. We should all made a list of civic responsibilities that we are able to kept and consciously add to our responsibilities as we are able. Everyday we oughts to ask ourselves, "which would better look around, take note of where there is need, be less individualistic and make the effort to fulfill our civic responsibilities".

Let's Practice!

If we work together, we can achieve anything!

Instructions: Match the first part of the sentence from Column A with the last part of the sentence in Column B. Create and write a new sentence.

COLUMN A

1. If you look around, you will see that there are lots of small and large
2. If you want to help people you can donate
3. If you want to help yourself, you
4. If you want to help the environment, you

COLUMN B

- a. money to a charitable organization or volunteer your time.
- b. differences we can all make, every day.
- c. can buy products from companies that follow the zero waste initiative.
- d. can exercise and keep healthy.

Extension Activity

Do a "good deeds" survey.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Use a survey to find out what kinds of good deeds people do and how often they do them.
- With a partner, write at least five questions that you can ask people to find out about good deeds that they do.
- Ask at least five people in your class or in your community your questions and record their answers.
- Summarize the results and write a paragraph about the good deeds that people do.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I write survey questions with a partner.

☐
☐

I ask at least five people my survey questions.

☐
☐

I write down the answers to the survey questions.

☐
☐

I summarize the survey results in a paragraph.

☐
☐

Target Words

- to donate (verb): to give e.g. If you want to help people you can donate money to a charitable organization or volunteer your time.
- waste (noun): unwanted material
e.g. If you want to help the environment, you can buy products from companies that follow the zero waste initiative and use sustainable resources.
- ecotourism (noun): a form of travel that includes learning about the protection of the natural world e.g. You can participate in ecotourism.
- sustainable (adjective): able to be maintained
e.g. We try to only use sustainable sources.
- civic (adjective): of a town or city or the people who live in it e.g. We should all make a list of civic responsibilities that we are able to keep.
- individualistic (adjective): each person thinking about themselves
e.g. We'd better look around, take note of where there is need, be less individualistic and make the effort to fulfill our civic responsibilities.

Learning Points

Modals for Obligation, Recommendation, and Intention - Review

You use modals to talk about obligation, recommendation and intention. When you use modals, you are able to be more precise about what you think and feel. It also makes certain contexts clearer for the listener or reader.

Refer to the chart for a summary to see which modal is suitable to use in a specific context.

Modal	Meaning/Use	Example
should	to talk about obligation and recommendation to give advice with I ... in questions with wh -words in questions requesting information	The policy says that the company should reimburse employees for holiday hours. I should leave early tomorrow morning. What should we do if we have questions? Should I e-mail you first before I book it?
ought to	in speaking when you talk about obligation	Drivers ought to be more careful on icy roads.
had better	to express urgency, when there might be a negative consequence	We'd better call security right away!
must	to refer to an obligation imposed on yourself	I must remember to make that doctor's appointment - I keep forgetting!
may/might	in the first conditional to talk about a lesser certainty of a result	If it rains tomorrow, I may stay home or I might go to the movies. I don't know yet.

Examples:

- Maybe I should have learned about this long ago, but it's never too late to start!
- We must all find a way to contribute.
- We should all make a list of civic responsibilities that we are able to keep and consciously add to our responsibilities as we are able.
- Every day we ought to ask ourselves, "What small thing can I do today to help the people around me?"
- We'd better look around, take note of where there is need, be less individualistic and make the effort to fulfill our civic responsibilities.

Learning Points

The First Conditional - Review

You use the first conditional to talk about events or situations that are likely to happen. You can use it to talk about events in the present or the future.

Let's take a look at how to structure a first conditional sentence.

If	Condition	Result
If	it does not rain,	I'll go to the beach.

Notice that you are using the Simple Present in the condition clause, even though you are referring to the future. You use will + verb to talk about the possible future result.

So the structure of the first conditional is:

If + Simple Present, + will + base verb

Notice that you use a comma after the condition clause. If you start the sentence with the result clause, then you do not have to use a comma.

You can use other phrases instead of if or if not to make your language more varied and sophisticated. Two alternatives you can use to introduce the condition clause are provided that and so long as.

For example:

If you come down from the tree now, I won't call the fire department.

So long as you come down from the tree now, I won't call the fire department.

Provided that you come down from the tree now, I won't call the fire department.

Provided that is more formal than if.

Examples:

- If you look around, you will see that there are lots of small and large contributions that we can all make.
- If you want to help people, you can donate money to a charitable organization or volunteer your time.
- If you want to help the environment, you can buy products from companies that follow the zero waste initiative.
- If you want to help yourself, you can exercise and keep healthy.
- If we all improve ourselves, we will improve the world.

